SALT LAKE CITY

EXPLORE :

Utah's capital city is a beautiful place to explore year round. This vibrant , walkable city is full of history. The main tourisit attraction is Temple Square, where the headquarters of the LDS (Mormon) Church are located. This beautifully landscaped 10 acre complex full of gorgeous buildings has free guided tours offered daily. If shopping is your vice, head across the street after your tour and hit the stunning City Creek Center, where an actual creek runs through it!

EAT :

There is no shortage of great places to eat in SLC. If you'll be in town on a Sunday, make sure to make reservations at The Grand America Hotel for their Sunday brunch. It is THE most amazing brunch I have ever experienced. For dinner, don't miss The Copper Onion. It's a great place for small plates, but there will be a wait, so reservations are recommended. For breakfast, Eva's, with it's cheery blue Boulangerie sign, will welcome you in for buttery, flaky French pastries. You'll forget you're still in the states.

STAY :

SLC is one of the most pedestrian friendly cities I have been in. It also has an impressively easy to use (and free downtown) rail system. It's easy and safe to walk around and has some nice hotel options. My hands down favorite, and what I consider to be the nicest place to stay in SLC, is The Grand America. Other great options are: The Little America (yep, the Grand's sister hotel) The Marriott Salt Lake City Center
